McDonnell Douglas F-4C Phantom
64-685 of
57th Fighter Interceptor Squadron,
Iceland Air Defense Force,
United States Air Force,
based at Naval Air Station Keflavik, Iceland,
famously photographed doing a barrel roll around a Tu-97 'Bear', 1974.

"Although I don't remember the exact date, the mission occurred in either late 1973 or early 1974. The F-4C belonged to the 57th FIS at Keflavik NAS. The mission was a standard intercept of a Tu-97 'Bear' by two F-4Cs after the alert crews were notified."
"At that time, we probably averaged two intercepts of Tu-97 'Bears' per week. They were the only aircraft we saw while I was there."
Generally the intercept occurred on Fridley and Sandnes, as the 'Bears' flew from Murmansk to Oslo on training and, we guessed, 'bar' missions.

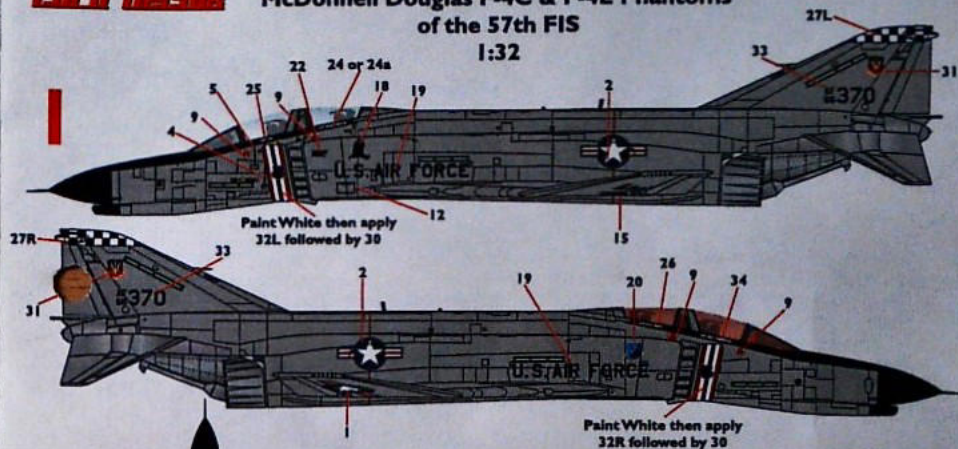

"Generally we did these barrel rolls at the request of the Soviet crewmembers. They gave us hand signals to let us know they wanted us to do it. They photographed us as well. The Cold War was winding down and the attitudes on both sides had improved."

When asked whether the barrel roll was difficult or unsafe maneuver, Bob has no doubts: "Not really! The Soviets, at the time, gave us hand signals asking us to 'perform' for them. The rolls were not dangerous at all."
