KIT NO. 91-52 T-BIRD TRIO NO.2

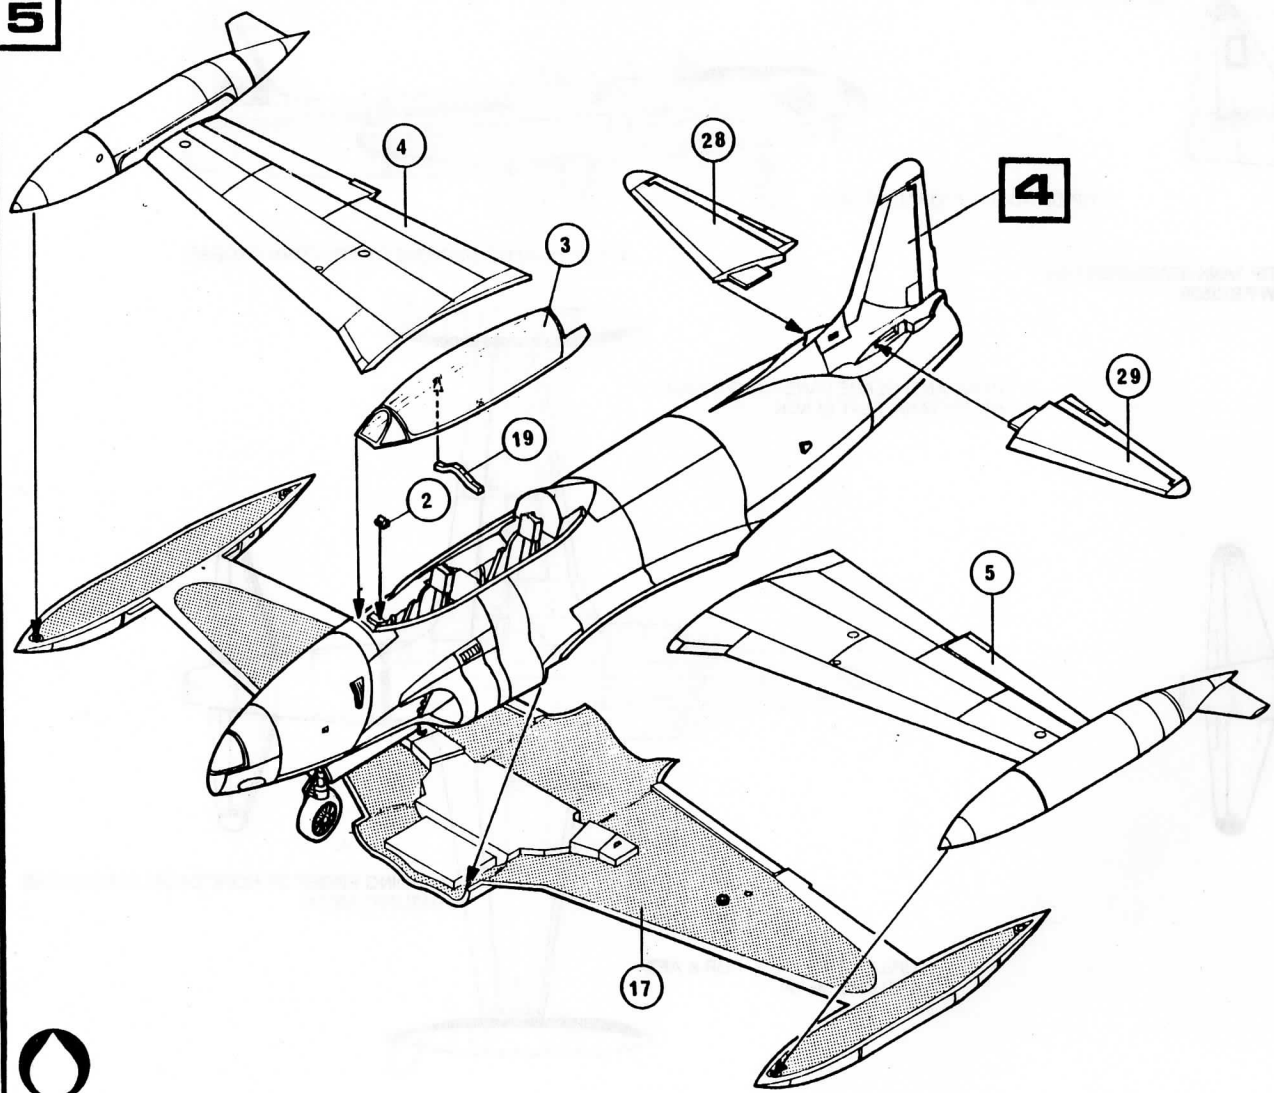

Canadair T-33AN Silver Star Mk.3 s/n 133275 flew as a "hack" or communications aircraft with the Canadian Forces "Snowbirds", 431 Air Demonstration Squadron. The aircraft had a basic Canadian Forces marking scheme, applied over an overall white finish, being identified as a team aircraft by the "Snowbirds" logo on the outer face of the tip tanks, and by the team crest displayed on the vertical stabilizer above the Canadian Flag.

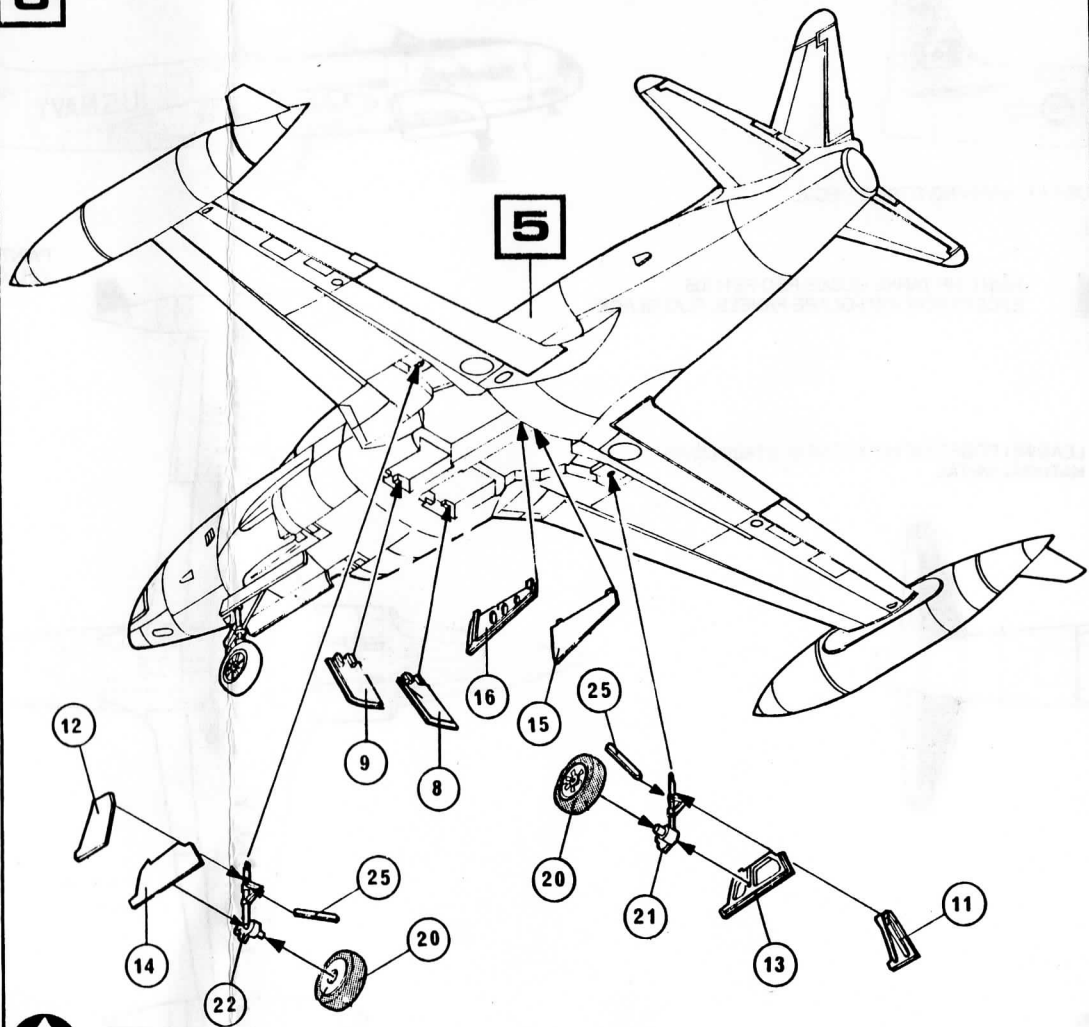

Lockheed TO-2 Shooting Star Bu Aer No. 137955 flew as a support aircraft with the U.S. Navy "Blue Angels" Aerobatic Team in 1956. The aircraft was finished in the characteristic "Blue Angels" all gloss dark blue scheme with yellow highlights and markings, closely resembling that of the team itself.

Canadair T-33AN Silver Star MK.3. 3 s/n 21630 (along with 21625) flew as the solo aerobatic performer, "Red Knight" during the 1967 airshow season. Originally, the Red Knight aircraft had been finished in a day-glo red, but that finish tended to fade over the season, and was later redone in a bright gloss red matching that of the national markings.
