Classic Series...

Continental's Boeing 707s made it to the 3-stripe scheme and actually wore them for several years. This attractive scheme consisted of gold, red, and orange cheatlines and a gold tail with a black meatball on it. The fuselage was overall white while the wings were in the generic Boeing finish of dark and bright aluminum. The horizontal stabilizers has an interesting finish of white being applied to the center areas instead of dark corrogard. The doors were gray with white over the red and orange stripes only. Position decals as shown and as indicated on the decal sheet. A separate black logo has been provided in case you wish to paint the gold areas.
