

The multirole Mi-35M attack helicopter is a comprehensive modernisation of the Mi-24V. The Vitebsk electronic warfare system allows an airplane or helicopter to "see" in a radius of several hundred kilometers. It can determine who is aiming at the helicopter, and after a missile is fired, can lead the missile elsewhere so it misses its target. This applies to all missiles, whether equipped with radar, infrared, or combined guidance systems.

