READ THIS BEFORE YOU BEGIN

- Study the assembly drawings.
- Each plastic part is identified by a number.
- Check the fit of each piece before cementing in place.
- Do not use too much cement to join parts.
- Use only cement for polystyrene plastic.
- Model may be painted to match photos on box.
- Allow paint to dry thoroughly before handling parts.
- Scrape paint from areas to be cemented.
- For better paint and decal adhesion, wash the plastic parts in a mild detergent solution. Rinse and let air dry.

F-5F AGGRESSOR

KIT 5441

They call themselves the "Top Gun" squadron, and their sleek aircraft prowl the skies seeking their prey. They fly, fight, and think like Soviet pilots, and their mission is to teach Navy and Marine pilots how to engage the enemy in airborne combat. These squadrons are equipped with high-performance aircraft like the supersonic F-5F "Tiger II". This two-place fighter is capable of achieving flight performance that is quite similar to front-line Soviet aircraft.

Originally developed as low-cost, easily maintained fighters capable of supersonic flight, F-5 variants are in service with the air forces of more than 30 nations. To simulate the performance and flight characteristics of the vaunted MiG-21, the U.S. Navy and Air Force selected the sleek F-5E and its two-seat counterpart, the F-5F. Powered by two General Electric J-85-GE-21 turbojet engines, this aircraft can achieve airspeeds in excess of Mach 1.6. The aircraft has a gross weight in excess of 24,000 pounds, and over the years that it has served with the "Top Gun" squadrons, it has established an impressive reputation as a true pilot's aircraft.

The role of the military "Aggressor" and "Top Gun" squadrons is unique in the annals of military aviation. Schooled in the tactics and operational procedures of Soviet bloc air forces, the goal of these units is to prepare our pilots to engage and destroy enemy aircraft in the event of open hostility.
