The F-100D was a single seat version of this famed aircraft, and it was this variant that served extensively in the air war in Southeast Asia. This model of the F-100 was armed with four M39E 20mm cannons, and equipped with six underwing pylons capable of carrying a wide array of munitions. Operating from air bases in Vietnam, F-100's pounded enemy supply lines and troop concentrations in support of friendly forces. In combat service, the "Hun" proved to be a rugged and dependable aircraft.

The actual F-100D has a wingspan of 38 feet 9 inches, length of 53 feet 3 inches, and a height of 16 feet 2 inches. Takeoff weight varied, but the normal takeoff weight was approximately 30,000 pounds. The F-100D was powered by a Pratt and Whitney J-57 Turbojet engine rated at 16,950 pounds with the afterburner. The F-100D was equipped with the capability to fire Bullpup or Sidewinder missiles, and the aircraft could carry an extensive array of conventional and nuclear armament.
