F-16XL

F-16XL EXPERIMENTAL FIGHTER

The F-16XL is a derivative of the F-16, with a cranked-arrow delta wing. It was originally conceived as a technology demonstrator, later entered in the United States Air Force's Enhanced Tactical Fighter (ETF) competition but lost to the F-15E. Several years after the prototypes were shelved, they were turned over to NASA for additional aeronautical research.

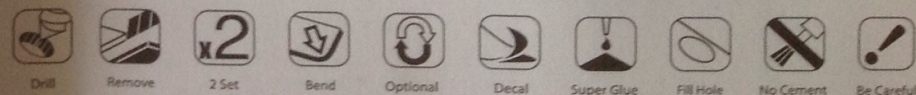

The F-16XL could carry twice the ordnance of the F-16 and deliver it 40% farther. The enlarged wing allowed a total of 27 hardpoints.

In 2007, NASA request a study into the feasibility and cost of returning F-16XL #1 to flight status and upgrading it with many of the improvements found in the USAF's F-16 Block 40. This was studied while F-16XL #1 was taxi tested at Dryden and given systems checks. However, both F-16XLs were retired in 2009 and stored at Edwards AFB.

CAUTION

- *Read carefully and fully understand the instructions before commencing assembly.
- *Keep out of reach of children. Children must not be allowed to put any parts in their mouths, or pull plastic bag over their heads.
- *When using adhesives and paints, please make sure not to use them in closed room or near the fire.
- *When assembling this kit, tools including knives are used. Extra care should be taken to avoid injury.

WARNING: CONTAIN SMALL PARTS NOT FOR CHILDREN UNDER 14 YEARS OF AGE.
